

Enjoy The South, Southern Fried Style!!!!

November 1st, 2007

Atlanta, GA-Celebrating the wide array of down home peculiarities of the South, The Southeastern Chapter of The National Cartoonists Society proudly introduces "Southern Fried Comics." In this 26 page offering, a host of talented artists and writers offer a humorous spin on many aspects of Southern livin'.

The title offers a satirical glimpse into the world of good, 'ole fashion, country living, modeled in the vein of the work of underground comics pioneer R. Crumb, of "Fritz The Cat", and "Zap Comix" fame.

"The whole point of the book is to goof on the yee-haw, trailer dwellin', tobacco spittin', unsophisticatedness that is part of life in the South," "Southern Fried Comics" contributor Mark Stancil (Terminus Media) said.

Bringing these humor laced anecdotes to life include some of the comic industries' most talented and creative minds. Starting with Bradwick McGinty's (Pee Dog Party) side splitting "Monster Truck" wrap around cover, readers will soon realize just how durn' crazy the South is!

Whether it be the Southern laced tale of dinosaurs entitled "Plato", by Stephanie Gladden (Cartoon Network), a rip-roarin' visit by Atlanta urban legend "Hogzilla", penned by Mark Stancil (Terminus Media), and illustrated by Ben Boiling (Cracked, Thwak), or John Lotshaw's (Plan 9's Accidental Centaurs) parody of that "fine dining" fixture of the South known as "Hash House", readers everywhere will be bowled over with laughter.

At a satisfactory price of $5.00, "Southern Fried Comics" should not be missed!

For information on ordering, please visit_

www.terminusmedia.com.